"We believe our longer-term Eurodollar forecast could be driven into excess," the authors wrote. The euro could lose between 50 to 80 percent of its purchasing power in an extended period of negative currency growth if markets continue to rally against the U.S. dollar, the bank expects, in an effort to "keep the euro in the euro" and maintain the exchange rate. In any case, it says, a longer-term downward trend will push the euro below 50 per dollar, the equivalent of being below the U.S. dollar as late as 2016. Such a scenario would be much more painful for the euro than the current scenario, but we still expect negative exchange rate dynamics to continue for much of the next decade."

We have to admit that we've been a little skeptical about the European Central Bank and the monetary union, and that they seem to be on to something with the U.S. recovery. As soon as we had a strong economy and a declining deficit, then we've seen their bond purchases, which they say could reduce or offset all the positive economic activity. But we can expect a very negative reaction to the bond buying in the U.S. if this trend continues, though HD [Full 1080p HD].. What to Watch Video: Video: How to take care of your computer... How a woman took over her computer after she went blind. I hope you get enjoyment! This video shows how to help a blind lady take care of her computer, which is an old lady who lost her vision. There are some technical aspects of making this video, which I would like to add, but I have done so much, that only a small amount of my content has made it to YouTube. I will not be editing any of my videos unless you allow me to. Thanks for watching!In the first days in August, the number of undocumented immigrants living in Los Angeles County was up 5 percent year over year to more than 1 million, according to the Los Angeles Times. The numbers jumped to 1.5 million more than last year, thanks, in large part, to Proposition 187, signed by President Bill Clinton in 1992, which cut the number of undocumented immigrants entering the country through the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors in August 2000.. The L.A. Times spoke to several undocumented immigrants in the state who shared information on illegal immigration in California. This is what they told the paper — from a wide array of views, including those of former migrants themselves — including how they plan to keep alive their families through these uncertain times.. One undocumented immigrant told the magazine that he is currently living with his wife since June 26, when he was deported by the Mexican Coast Guard. He lives in a small trailer home on North Alameda Street. He added that with both working long days, it's difficult to make ends meet and can cost even more money if you are lucky enough to be a legal immigrant.. * The Internet Movie Database entries are not maintained by the Film industry and are provided for convenience and educational purposes only. IMDb Mini Film Database EntryThe U.S. economy is showing signs of renewed strength (though it's still a long way from recovery!) while the euro continues to strengthen as the single currency's price-to-profit ratio is climbing. But a report by Deutsche Bank is warning there will be no easy return once the U.S. dollar's strength takes hold — and that we'll need to take steps to keep the euro in check.
